

W. D. P. B.

John Carter Brown.

John Carter Brown

A

The Relation of the late Battell fought

in the year 1644 between

[the King
Philip, Vincent]

In which was slain and captured

many of the King's and taken into the hands of the Parliament

With the picture
things there

LONDON
Printed by M. T. for Nathaniel Batts
at the Station, 1673.

270

A True Relation of
the Late Battell fought
in New England, between the English, and the Pequet Salvages :

In which was slaine and taken prisoners about 700 of the Salvages, and those which escaped, had their heads cut off by the Mohocks :

With the present state of things there.

LONDON,
Printed by M. P. for Nathanael Butter,
and John Bellamie. 1638.

RPJCB

Ad Lectorem

Authoris carmen ἑυχαριστικόν de Victoria hac Nov^o-Anglica, 1637.

Ducit in Americam varios gens Angla Colonos:
et bene conveniunt sydera, terra, solum.
Ast ferus hoc prohibet, solis vagabundus in arvis,
insolitóq; aliquos, incola, Marte necat.
Quod simul invitas crimen pervenit ad aures
Angligenum, irato murmure cuncta fremunt.
Tunc læsi justa arma movent, hostemq; sequuntur,
struxerat, haud vavis, qui munimenta locis.
Invadunt vallum, palis sudibusq; munitum:
(pax erit: hoc uno solvitur ira modo.)
Vndiq; concidunt omnes, pars una crematur:
post, cæsi, aut capti cætera turbaluit.
Vtrâq; letatur Pequetanis Anglia victis,
et novus æternum, hîc, figimur hospes ait.
Virginia exultat, vicina Novonia gaudet,
Signaq; secure certa quietis habent.
Plaudite qui colitis Mavortia sacra nepotes,
et serat incultos tutus arator agros.
Qua novus orbis erat, spiranti numine, (Lector)
Anglia nascetur, quæ novus orbis erit.

P. Vincentius.

1007

THE HISTORY OF THE

ROYAL SOCIETY

IN TWO VOLUMES

BY JOHN VAUGHAN

ESQ; OF GREAT BRITAIN

IN TWO VOLUMES

THE SECOND

AND LAST

VOLUME

LONDON

Printed by J. Sturges, in Strand

A true Relation of the late Battell fought in New England, between the English and Salvages, with the present state of things there.

New England (a name now every day more famous) is so called, because the English were the first Discoverers, & are now the Planters thereof. It is the Easterne Coast of the North part of America, upon the Southwest adjoyning to Virginia, and part of that Continent, large and capable of innumerable people. It is in the same height with the North of Spaine, and South part of France, and the temper not much unlike: as pleasant, as temperate and as fertile as either, if managed by industrious hands.

That

A Battell in New England.

This is the Stage. Let us in a word see the Actors. The yeare 1620, a Company of English part out of the Low Countries, and some out of London and other parts, were sent for Virginia. But being cut short by want of wind, and hardnesse of the Winter, they landed themselves in this Countrey, enduring, with great hope and patience, all the misery that Desart could put upon them, and imployed their wits to make their best use of that then Snow-covered land for their necessities. After two yeares experience of the nature of the soyle, commodities, and natives, they returned such intelligence to their Masters, that others tooke notice of their endeavours, and the place. Then some Westerne Merchants collected a stocke, and employed it that way. But they discouraged through losses, and want of present gaine, some Londoners, and others (men of worth) undertooke it, with more resolution, building upon the old foundation. Hence a second plantation adjoynd to the other, but supported with with better pillars, and greater meanes. All beginnings are ever difficult. The halfe, saith the Proverbe, is more then the whole. Some errours were committed, and many miseries were endured. No man is wise enough to shunne all evils that may happen; but patience and painefulnesse overcame all. The successe proved answerable even to ambitious expectations, notwithstanding the impediments inevitable to such undertakings.

A Battell in New England.

There is scarce any part of the world but habitable, though more commodiously by humane culture. This part (though in it's Naturals) nourished many natives, distinguished into divers petty nations and factions. It were needlesse curiosity to dispute their originall, or how they came hither. Their outsides say they are men, their actions say they are reasonable. As the thing is, so it operateth. Their correspondency of disposition with us, argueth all to be of the same constitution, & the sons of Adam, and that we had the same Maker, the same matter, the same mould. Only Art and Gracc have given us that perfection, which yet they want, but may perhaps be as capable thereof as we. They are of person straight and tall, of limbes big and strong, seldome seene violent, or extreme in any passion. Naked they go except a skin about their waste, and sometimes a Mantle about their shoulders. Armed they are with Bowes and Arrowes, Clubs, lavelins, &c. But as soyle, aire, diet, & custome make of itimes a memorable difference in mens natures, so is it among these Nations, whose countries there are like so many Shires here, of which every onè hath their Sagamore, or King, who as occasion urgeth, commandeth them in Warre, and ruleth them in Peace. Those where the English pitched, have shewed themselves very loving and friendly, and done courtesies beyond expectation for these new-come Inmates. So that much hath beene written of their civilitie and peacefull conversation, untill this yeare.

B mould.

A Battell in new England.

But Nature, heavens daughter, and the imme-

A Battell in New England.

immediate character of that divine power, as by her light she hath taught us wisdom, for our owne defence, so by her fire she hath made us fierce, injurious, revengefull, and ingenious in the device of meanes for the offence of those we take to be our enemies. This is seene in creatures voide of reason, much more in mankind. We have in us a mixture of all the Elements, and fire is predominant when the humours are exagitated. All motion causeth heat. All provocation mooveth choller, and choller inflamed, becometh a phrensie, a fury, especially in barbarous and cruell natures. These things are conspicuous in the Inhabitants of New England. In whose Southermost part are the Pequets, or Pequants, a statly warlike people, which have been terrible to their neighbours, and troublesome to the English.

In February last they killed some English at Sea brooke, a Southerly Plantation beyond Cape Cod, at the mouth of the River of Connectacutt. Since that the

A Battell in New England.

Lieutenant of the Fort there, with tenne men armed, went out to fire the Meddowes, and to fit them for mowing. Arriving there he started three Indians, which he pursued a little way, thinking to cut them off. But presently they perceived themselves incompassed with hundreds of them, who let flie their arrowes furiously, and came desperately upon the musles of their Muskets, though the English discharged upon them, with all the speed they could. Three English men were there slaine, others wounded. The eight that remained, made their way through the Salvages with their swords, and so got under the command of the Canon of the Fort, (otherwise they had been all slaine, or taken prisoners) one of the wounded falling downe dead at the Forts Gate. The Indians thus fleshed and encouraged, besieged the Fort as neere as they durst approach. The besieged presently dispatched a messenger to the Governour at the Bay, to acquaint him with these sad tidings, who with all speed lent unto.

A Battell in New England.

unto their aide, Captaine Vnderhill, with twenty souldiers. Not long after these Salvages went to Water-Towne, now called Wetherfield, and there fell upon some that were sawing, and slew nine more, whereof one was a woman, the other a childe, and tooke two yong Maids prisoners, killing some of their cattell, and driving some away. Mans nature insulteth in victory and prosperity, and by good successe is animated even in the worst of wicked actions. These Barbarians triumphed and proceeded, drawing into their Confederacy other Indians, as the Nyantets, and part of the Mohigens; of whom about fifty chose rather to joyne with the English, and sat downe at New-Towne, at Connectacut (now called Hereford, as the other Towne that went from Dorchester thither is called Windsore.) Fame encreaseth by flying. The former sad newes was augmented by the report of sixtie men slaine at Master Pinchew Plantation, &c. which proved false. The Narragansets neighbours to the Pequets, sent word to the English that the Pequets had solicited them to joyne their forces with them. Hereupon the Councell ordered that none should go to worke, nor travell, no not so much as to Church, without Arms. A Corps of Guard of 14. or 15 souldiers was appointed to watch every night, and Centinels were set in convenient places about the Plantations, the Drumme beating when they went to the Watch, and every man commanded to be in readinesse upon an Alarme, upon paine of five pound. A day of fast and prayers was also kept. Fourty more were sent to strengthen the former twenty that went to the Fort, and 50 under the command of Captain Mason, which being conjoynd, were about 100. Two hundred more were to be sent after them with all expedition.

A Battell in New England.

The 50 Mohigins that joynd with the English, scouring about, espied 7 Pequets, killed five of them outright, wounded the sixt mortally, tooke the seventh prisoner, and brought him to the Fort. He braved the English, as though they durst not kill a

A Battell in New England.

Pequet. Some will have their courage to be thought invincible, when all is desperate. But it availed this Salvage nothing; they tied one of his legs to a post, and 20 men with a rope tied to the other, pulled him in pieces, Captain Vnderhill shooting a pistol through him, to dispatch him. The two Maids which were taken prisoners were redeemed by the Dutch.

Those 50 sent from the three plantations of Connecticut with Captain Mason, being joyned with Captain Vnderhill and his 20 men, (for the other 40 were not yet arrived with them) immediately went upon an expedition against the Pequets, after they had searched for them. The manner was this. The English with some Mohigens went to the Naragansets, who were discontented that they came no sooner, saying they could arme and set forth two or three hundred at six houres warning, (which they did accordingly, for the assistance of the English) onely they desired the advice of the Sagamore, Mydutonno, what way they should go to worke, and how they should fall on the Pequets: whose judgement, in all things, agreed with the English, as though they had consulted together. Then went they to the Nyanticke, and he

A Battell in New England:

he set forth 200 more, but before they went, he swore them after his maner upon their knees. As they marched they deliberated which Fort of the Pequets they should assault, resolving upon the great Fort, and to be there that night. Being on the way, and having a mile to march through woods and Swamps, the Nyanticke hearts failed, for feare of the Pequets, and so they ran away, as also did some of the Narragansets. Of five or 600 Indians, not above halfe were left: and they had followed the rest had not Captaine Vnderhill upbraided them with cowardise, and promised them they should not fight or come within shot of the Fort, but onely surround it as farre off. At breake of day the 70 English gave the Fort a Volly of shot, whereat the Salvages within made an hideous and pittifull cry; the shot without all question flying through the Pallisadoes (which stood not very close) and killing or wounding some of them. Pitty had hindred further hostile proceedings, had not the remembrance of the bloodshed, the captive Maid, and cruell infolency of those Pequets, hardned the hearts of the English, & stopped their eares unto their cries. Mercy marres all somtimes, severe Iustice must now and then take place. The

(11)

The long forbearance, and too much lenitie of the English toward the Virginian Salvages, had like to have beene the destruction of the whole Plantation. These Barbarians (ever treacherous) abuse the goodnesse of those that condescend to their rudenesse and imperfections. The English went, resolutely up to the dore of the Fort. What shall wee enter said Captaine Vnder-hill? What come we for else? answered one Hedge, a young Northampton-shire gentleman: who advancing before the rest, pluckt away some bushes and entered. A stout Pequet encounters him, shootes his arrow (drawne to the head) into his right arme, where it stuck. He slast the Salvage betwixt the arme and shoulder, who pressing towards the dore, was killed by the English. Immediately Master Hedge incountred another, who perceiving him upon him before he could deliver his arrow, gave backe: but he struck up his heeles and run him thorow; after him hee killed two or three more. Then about halfe the English entered, fell on with courage, and slew manie. But being straitned for roome because of the Wigwams (which are the Salvage huts or cabins) they called for fire to burne them. An English man stept into a Wigwam and stooping for a fire-brand, an Indian was ready to knock out his braines. But he whipt out his sword and runne him into the belly, that his bowels followed. Then were the Wigwams set on fire, which so raged, that what therewith, what with the sword, in little more than an hour, betwixt three and foure hundred of them were killed, and of the English onely two, one of them by our owne Muskets, as is thought. For the Narragansets beset the Fort so close, that not one escaped. The whole worke ended, ere the Sun was an hour high, the Conquerors retraited downe toward the Pinnace, but in their march were infested by the rest of the Pequets: who scouting up and downe, from the swamps and thickets let flie their arrowes amaine, which were answered by English bullets. The Indians that then assisted the English, waiting the fall of the Pequets, (as the dogge watcheth the shot of the fowler to fetch the prey) still fetched them their heades, as any were slaine. At last the Narragansets perceiving powder and shot to faile, and fearing to fall into the hands of their enemies, betooke themselves to flight upon the sudden, and were as suddenly encompassed by the Pequets: Feare defeateth great armies. If an apprehension of eminent danger once possesse them, it is in vaine.

vaine to stay the runne awaies. No oratory can recall them, no command can order them againe. The onely sure way, is by all meanes that may be, promises, threats, perswasions, &c. to maintaine and keepe up courage, where yet it is. But these fearefull companions had one Anchor, whose cable was not broken. They sent speedily to the English, who came to their reskew: and after five Muskets discharged the Pequets fled. Thus freed from that feare, they vowed henceforth to cleave closer to the English, and never to forsake them in time of need. The reason why the English wanted amunition was, because they had left that which they had for store with their drum at the place of their consultation: But found it in their returne. They now all went a ship-board and sayled to Scabrooke-Fort, where the English feasted the Narragansets three daies, and then sent them home in a pinnace.

Let mee now describe this military fortresse which naturall reason & experience hath taught them to erect, without mathematicall skill, or use of yron toole. They choole a piece of ground dry and of best advantage, forty or fifty foote square. (But this was at least 2 acres of ground.) here they pitch close together, as they can young trees and halfe trees, as thicke as a mans thigh, or the calfe of his legge. Ten or twelve foote high they are above the ground, and within rammed three foote deepe, with undermining, the earth being cast up for their better shelter against the enemies dischargements. Betwixt these pallisadoes are divers loope-holes, through which they let flie their winged messengers. The doore for the most part is entred side-waies, which they stop with boughes or bushes as need requireth. The space within is full of Wigwams, wherein their wives and children live with them.

 These huts or little houses are framed like our garden arbours, something more round, very strong and handsome, covered with close wrought mats, made by their women of flagges, rushes, and hempen threds, so defensive, that neither raine, though never so sad and long, nor yet the winde, though never so strong can enter.
 The top through a square hole giveth passage to the smoke, which in rainy weather, is covered with a pluver. This Fort was so crowded with these numerous dwellings, that the English wanted foote-rooms to grapple with their advertaries, and therefore set fire on all.

The Mohigens which sided with the English

in this action behaved themselves stoutly. Which the other Pequets understanding, cut off all the Mohigens that remaine with them, (lest they should turne to the English) except seven: who flying to our Countrey-men related this newes, and that about an hundred Pequets were slaine or hurt, in the fight with the English at their returne from the Fort. Moreover that they had resolved to have sent an hundred choyce men out of their Fort as a party against the English, the very day after they were beaten out by them. But being now vanquished Sasacus the Pequetan Captaine, with the remainder of this massacre was fled the Countrey.

It is not good to give breathing to a beaten enemy, lest he returne armed if not with greater puissance, yet with greater despight and revenge. Too much security or neglect in this kinde hath oft times ruined the Conquerours. The 200 English therefore, resolved on before, were now sent forth to chase the Barbarians and utterly roote them out. Whereupon Cap. Vnderhill with his 20 men returned and gave this account of those exploits of the New-Englanders, which here we have communicated to the old English world. This last partie invaded the Pequetan Countrey, killed twenty three, saved the lives of two Sagamores for their use hereafter, as occasion shall serve, who have promised to doe great matters for the advancing of the English affaires. They pursued the remnant threescore miles beyond the Country (till within 36. miles of the Dutch plantations on Hudsons river) where they fought with them, killed fortie or fiftie besides those that they cut off in their retreat, and tooke prisoners 180, that came out of a Swampe and yeilded themselves upon promise of good quarter. Some other small parties of them were since destroyed, and Captaine Patrick with 16. or 18. brought 80 Captives to the Bay of Boston. The newes of the flight of Sassacus their Sagamore, is also confirmed. He went with forty men to the Mowhacks, which are cruell bloodie Caniballs, and the most terrible to their neighbours of all these nations: but will scarce dare ever to carrie armes against the English, of whom they are sore afraid, not daring to encounter white men with their hot-mouth'd weapons, which spit nothing else but bullets and fire.

The terrour of victorie changeth even the affection of the allies of the vanquished, and the securing of our owne estates makes us neglect, yea forsake forlake, or turne against our confederates, and side with their enemies and ours, when wee despaire of better remedie. These cruell, but wily Mowhacks, in contemplation of the English, and to procure their friendship, entertaine the fugitive Pequets and their Captaine, by cutting off all their heads and hands, which they sent to the English, as a testimony of their love and service.

A day of thanksgiving was solemnly celebrated for this happie successe, the Pequetans now seeming nothing but a name, for not lesse than 700. are slaine or taken prisoners. Of the English are not slaine in all above 16. One occurrent I may not forget. The endeavours of private men are ever memorable in these beginnings: the meanest of the vulgar is not incapable of vertue, and consequently neither of honour. Some actions of Plebeians have elsewhere bene taken for great achievements. A pretty sturdy youth of new Ipswich, going forth, somewhat rashly, to pursue the Salvages, shot off his Musket after them till all his powder and shot were spent; which they perceiving, re-assaulted him, thinking with their hatchets to have knocked him in the head. But he so bestirred himselfe with the stock of his piece, and after with the barrell, when that was

was broken, that hee brought two of their heads to the armie. His owne desert and the incouragement of others will not suffer him to bee namelesse. Hee is called Francis Waine-wright, and came over servant with one Alexander Knight that kept an Inne in Chelmsford.

I have done with this tragick scene, whose catastrophe ended in a triumph. And now give mee leave to speake something of the present state of things there. The transcribing of all Colonies is chargeable, fittest for Princes or states to undertake. Their first beginnings are full of casualty and danger, and obnoxious to many miseries. They must bee well grounded, well followed, and managed with great stocks of money, by men of resolution, that will not bee daunted by ordinarie accidents. The Bermuda's and Virginia are come to perfection from meane, or rather base beginnings, and almost by as weake meanes, beyond all expectation, and reason. But a few private men by uniting their stocks and desires have now raised new-England to that height, that never any plantation of Spaniards, Dutch, or any other arrived at in so small a time. Gainc is the load-stone of adventures: Fish and Furrer, with Beaver wooll, were

were specious baits. But whiles men are all for their private profit, the publique good is neglected and languisheth. Woe-full experience had too evidently instructed New Englands Colonies in the precedents of Guiana, the Charibe Ilands, Virginia, and Novonia, or New-found-land, (now againe to bee planted by Sir David Kirke, though part of the old planters there yet remaine.) Wee are never wiser, than when wee are thus taught. The new Englanders therefore advanced the weale publique all they could, and so the private is taken care for.

Corne and Cattell are wonderfully encreased with them, and thereof they have enough, yea sometime to spare to new commers, besides spare roomes, or good houses to entertaine them in. Where they may make Christmas fires all winter, if they please for nothing. I speake not of the naturals of the Countrey, fish, fowle, &c. which are more than plentifull. They that arrived there this yeere out of divers parts of Old England say that they never saw such a field of 400 acres of all sorts of English graine as they saw at Winter-towne there. Yet that ground is not comparable to other parts of New England, as Salem, Ipswich, Newberry, &c. In a word, they have built faire Townes of the lands owne materials, and faire Ships too, some where of are here to be seene on the Thames. They have overcome cold and hunger, are dispersed securely in their Plantations sixty miles along the coast, and within the Land also along some small Creekes and Rivers, and are assured of their peace by killing the Barbarians, better than our English Virginians were by being killed by them. For having once terrified them, by severe execution of just revenge, they shall never heare of more harme from them, except (perhaps) the killing of a man or two at his worke, upon advantage, which their Centinels, and Corps du guards may easily prevent. Nay, they shall have those brutes their servants, their slaves, either willingly or of necessity, and docible enough, if not obsequious. The numbers of the English

D

such

English amount to above thirty thousand, which (though none did augment them out of England) shall every day bee, doubtlesse, encreated, by a facultie that God hath given the Brittish Ilanders to beget and bring forth more children, than any other nation of the world: I could justifie what I say from the mouthes of the Hollanders and adjoyning Provinces, where they confesse (though good breeders of themselves) that never woman bore two children, nor yet had so many by one man, till the English and Scotch frequented their warres and married with them. I could give a good reason hereof from nature, as a Philosopher (with modestie bee it spoken) but there is no neede. The aire of new England, and the Diet equall, if not excellling that of old England: besides their honour of marriage, and carefull preventing and punishing of furtive congression giveth them and us no small hope of their future puissance, and multitude of subjects. Herein, saith the Wiseman, consisteth the strength of a King, and likewise of a nation, or Kingdome.

But the desire of more gaine, the slavery of mankinde, was not the onely cause of our English endeavours for a plantation there. The propagation of Religion was that precious jewell, for which these Merchant venturers compassed both Sea and Land, and went into a farr Country to search and seat themselves. This, I am sure, they pretended, and I hope intended. Onely this blessing from my heart I sincerely wish them, and shall ever beseech the Almighty to bestow upon them, devout Piety towards God, faithfull loyaltie towards their Sovereigne, fervent charity among themselves, and discretion and sobriety in themselves, according to the saying of that blessed Apostle, μη υπερροειν παρ ο δει φροειν, αλλα φροειν εις το σφροειν

 Rom. 12.3. Not to bee wise (in spirituall things) above what wee ought to bee wise; but to bee wise unto wise sobriety.

Doubtlesse there was no other way better to chastise the insolencie of these insulting homicides, than a sharpe warre pursued with dexterity and speed. Virginia our mother plantation, and for her precedent a rule, hath what

(23)

taught us what to do in these difficulties; forewarned, forearmed. They were endangered by their friendship and peace, secured by their enmity and warre with the natives. From these experiments, shall the now inhabitants of those two Sister Lands, beat out unto themselves an Armour of prooffe, and lay a sure foundation to their future happinesse.

FINIS.

*Nil ob stare videtur quominus haec
Relatio typis mandetur.*

Novemb. ix. M.DC. xxxvii.

G. R. WECKHERLIN.

21215

A brief experience a gainst the 1 a gainst the plague of the heart
2 a gainst the plague of the bodie 3 or any other plague crose or trouble what so ever

~~D638~~
~~V773E13~~

D638
V773E1

